FORMER CIA INTERROGATOR LEADS INSIDER'S GUIDE TO INTELLIGENCE & INTERROGATION

(San Jose, CA, April 26, 2010) – On April 30, former CIA polygraph examiner and deception detection expert Barry McManus will lead Henley-Putnam University's next exclusive webinar, Insider's Guide to Intelligence & Interrogation. During the free webinar, Mr. McManus will cover topics essential to anyone interested in a career in intelligence or deception detection.

"In this field, many know how to interview and interrogate, but few know how to recognize deception properly in order to elicit appropriate responses", said Dr. Michael Corcoran, President of Henley-Putnam University and a former U.S. Secret Service Agent. "Barry not only is an expert in this craft, he has the additional skill of being able to educate others on what to look for in order to be more successful when questioning those who practice fabrication and concealment."

Insider's Guide to Intelligence & Interrogation will take place Friday, April 30, from 2:00 - 3:00 PM EDT. Those interested should register here (https://www2.gotomeeting.com/register/403748707). The webinar is open to the public and completely free of charge.

The webinar series, launched in 2009, was designed to bring the hands-on experience of former members of the CIA, Secret Service, FBI, and intelligence and federal law enforcement community to those seeking careers in Strategic Security. Registration information for upcoming webinars is available on Henley-Putnam's website at http://www.henley-putnam.edu/594-238.htm.

The webinar series is one of many career resources offered by Henley-Putnam University. The university's mentoring program assigns degree students with a high-level faculty or expert mentor to support them in making career decisions. In addition, through its online career portal, Henley-Putnam helps students research careers, explore university programs, prepare for a job search, locate employers and gain basic knowledge of the Strategic Security field.
